To fund for its growth expansion Yinson is exploring to list its FPSO segment which is valued at US$2.2bn in Oslo, ~38% higher than its current marketcap. This valuation excludes the FPSO Agogo (AG) project which has received prelim upfront capex funding of US$218m.

We opine that the growth prospect for Yinson is attractive as it is currently trading at FY24 PE of 10.6x as compared to the 5-yr average PE of 20.1x and FY24 EV/EBITDA of 5.6x vs. its 5-yr average value of 9.7x, we recommend YINSON a BUY ON WEAKNESS for its exciting growth and recurring business model.

Highlights:

Background – After successfully transformed into a FPSO player from a logistic company in 2010, YINSON has grown spectacularly to be the 4th largest FPSO owner by fleet size. Upon successful designing and constructing the FPSO (EPCIC), it leases and operates them on an agreed contract period and charter rate (non-EPCIC) with extension option. While the EPCIC revenue can fluctuate considerably, the recurring leasing income stream has been growing steadily. In 2019, it has forayed into the renewables market and green technology which are positive to achieve its ESG footprint and creating a separate engine to drive future growth (Fig. 1).

FPSO Offers Recurring Long-term Income Stream – Yinson’s recent FPSO contracts span more than 15yrs and an extension option of up to 10yrs. As the owner, Yinson is paid a fixed, daily hire rate which is not subjected to the oil and gas prices volatility nor the reservoir performance on which the FPSO operates, making the cash flow relatively stable and predictable. In the case of a downtime, the charterer is obligated to honour the hire payment as long as the downtime is less than 180days, providing Yinson a protected income stream. Since FY19, its FPSOs’ technical uptime has been above 98%.

Source: Company, PCM (Dec 22)

Lower Equity Funding under Tight Market - Oil majors continue to press forward investment to take advantage of current elevated oil prices, causing imbalance of FPSO supply and demand as the industry was facing years of underinvestment after the 2014 oil sump. The scenario is further exacerbated by the recent Russia-Ukraine war, which has raised energy security concern. Due to substantial conversion contracts in hand and deteriorating balance sheets in some FPSO players, FPSO builders are now experiencing capacity constraint to accept new orders. As such, FPSO players are in a better position to request the oil and gas producers to bear a big chunk of the FPSO capex.

Multiple FPSOs in the pipeline – Yinson has three ongoing FPSO projects, namely FPSO i) Anna Nery (AN) that expects first oil in Jan 23; ii) Maria Quteria (MQ); and iii) Atlanta (AT) which were secured in late-21. As time charter contribution from FPSO AN commences, the sustainable and recurring non-EPCIC revenue will increase whereas the EPCIC segment will see a replenishment from FPSO AG. With a daily hire rate of ~US$600k, the FPSO AN and AT will be leased at ~30% higher rate than FPSO JAK. The upcoming FPSO AG will see an even higher rate at >US$800k/day and an IRR of >20% which is the highest among all of its past FPSOs (Fig 3).

Improving Balance Sheet and Cash Flow - FPSO players are no stranger to high capex, thus high gearings. YINSON's net gearing has been manageable after the completion of rights issue in May 22 (Fig. 4). Its manageable gearing is partly due to its three issues of perpetual loans. Its gearing is expected to continue downtrend as chartering cash flow from FPSO AN kicks in from Jan 23. To lower its finance cost, Yinson has adopted swaps to convert ~55% of the project loans (RM5.5bn) into fixed rates. The remaining floating loans are hedged against rising interest rates. Besides, the A1 and A+ ratings from RAM and MARC have warranted its creditworthiness. This is reflective of the prudent financial management and strong cash flow generation from its FPSO operations.

Recommendation – Yinson is running a recurring business model which can avoid the impact of fluctuating oil prices as faced by many oil and gas companies. Its management has shown prudent track record in risk management. For instance, Yinson has been spreading out risks by accepting projects from different oil producers and has pushed for a 100% upfront funding from Enauta and FEP due to their small sizes and lack of track record. On a positive note, the worrying high gearings are subsiding in an encouraging trend. All in all, we recommend to BUY ON WEAKNESS on Yinson for its recurring business and growth prospect coupled with an exceptional management team.
